Fiordland is New Zealand's largest National Park and a World Heritage area. There are in excess of 600 kilometres of formed tracks for visitors to explore that traverse valley and alpine environment, earning this area a reputation as the Walking Capital of the World. Amongst these are the Great Walks the Milford, Kepler & Routeburn Tracks. The Great Walks are a classification given to these tracks by the Department of Conservation that recognises they are maintained to a specific standard and make up part of a network of significant walks within New Zealand.

In addition to Fiordland's world renown multi-day tracks there is a range of short walks that enable access to rainforest, lake and alpine vistas for those with limited time and fitness.

SAFETY IN THE HILLS

The Fiordland National Park is a mountainous area and can experience rapid changes in weather. Visitors should be advised to prepare adequately with appropriate clothing and equipment and to check forecasts carefully. It's important to ensure that peoples' experience levels match the skill and fitness levels of the activity they are undertaking. Guided walking not only delivers an enhanced experience by providing a greater opportunity to learn about the local environment but also helps minimise risk to visitors who are unfamiliar with the territory.

It is also important to keep possessions safe when visiting the National Park. While Fiordland currently enjoys low crime rates this is never guaranteed. A variety of track transport options are available. Please ensure you leave notice of your intentions when walking independently.

TE ANAU & MANAPOURI

Te Anau and Manapouri are both located on the fringes of Fiordland National Park with stunning lake and mountain vistas. These townships also provide convenient bases to:

- Stock up on provisions
- Check weather
- Get the most up to date information from local experts
- Check track conditions
- Rent or buy equipment from sports shops and hire companies
- Hire locator beacons (an important piece of equipment whilst hiking)
- Safely store vehicles
- Connect with track transport providers
- Post hiking massage or spa
- Relive the adventure in the warmth of local bars or restaurants
- Stay overnight in one of the many accommodation options.
